Cecilia's story

In Venezuela when I was younger we went driving every weekend and we'd have two children hiding in the boot of the car. When my husband was young he spent his school bus fare on something to eat and he told the teacher he'd lost his money and she paid his bus fare for him.

In Venezuela we have taxis that are full of people who are strangers. The driver has a route and when you want to get out you ask him to stop.

In London I love travelling by bus because you can see everything. Everything is new to me. It is very different to home. The buildings are huge.
